"The clarity my clients receive when I'm able to lay out a path forward in their business, help them make a strategic decision or solve a difficult issue— that's what I strive for in every meeting with a client and in every engagement. More than delivering a document, a spreadsheet, a plan, I know I've done my job when I am able to make a meaningful impact in the business and ultimately ease the entrepreneur's burden in some way."

As a multi-disciplinary, pragmatic and results-focused consultant, Cheryl Lockhart works with people like you - business owners and management teams that want to reach the next level. She takes start-up ideas and builds companies, guides average companies to greatness and takes successful organizations into new territory. It's not just about greater profit (although that's really important!), but also gaining control of your business, achieving more each day without putting in additional hours and making informed decisions.

You won't be offered a template solution by Cheryl; she works hard from the first meeting to truly understand your needs and come up with a personalized game plan to reach your goals. Cheryl will help you better understand your customers, your employees, your markets and your operations, and how to address problems unearthed. She does this through a variety of means such as business health reviews, voice of the customer projects, business and strategic planning, feasibility studies, international business plans, partnership charters, financial projections and marketing plans. She also lends her expertise to organizations in developing countries and worked as a gender equality consultant in Ukraine, a business advisor to garment manufacturers in Bali and a manager of Canadian government grants in Botswana.

Cheryl particularly enjoys working with her clients on an on-going basis, providing regular coaching, project management, encouragement and discipline.

Cheryl came to the world of consulting via the federal government, where she promoted agriculture trade opportunities - primarily to the Middle East. The best part of her job was working with Canadian businesses, providing them guidance and advice on export development. She chose to become an entrepreneur herself so that she could help Canadian businesses in a more hands-on manner and thus her consulting career was launched in 2002. Since that time she has completed over 175 projects for clients.

Cheryl is a graduate of the University of Alberta with a Bachelor of Commerce and holds the Certified Management Consultant designation. Outside of work, she plays competitive basketball and volunteers with her community league and is a director with the Edmonton and Area Land Trust and Edmonton Basketball Association
